Governor Albert Bryan Jr. signs legislation naming the University of the Virgin Islands campus on St. Thomas after Dr. Orville Edward Kean, who attended the bill-signing with his family

Governor Bryan Takes Action on 29 Bills, Vetoing Six

U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS — Governor Albert Bryan Jr. on Monday took action on 29 bills from the December 11, 2020, session of the 33rd Legislature, signing 23 of the measures into law and vetoing six of them.

Among the bills Governor Bryan approved are a bill providing amnesty for property owners who have enclosed portions of their homes without submitting building plans; a measure providing tax incentives to businesses that employ persons with disabilities; a bill pertaining to online learning requirements; and an amnesty period until June 30, 2021, waiving penalties for people who have not paid income taxes.

Regarding Bill No. 33-0360, which pertains to setting and implementing standards and requirements for online learning, Governor Bryan noted that the Virgin Islands Department of Education already is in compliance with the new regulations through recovery funds from the COVID-19 State of Emergency.

“I must raise the concern that funding will require constant attention in the future for the continued compliance with this Act on behalf of our children,” Governor Bryan wrote in his transmittal letter to the Legislature. “As the pandemic has caused the need that propelled the Virgin Islands education system forward with technological advancement, I encourage the Board of Education and the Department of Education to fully develop the policies to effectuate the intent of the Act.”

The Governor also approved Bill No. 33-0367, which relates to the composition of and the new duties for the Commission on Aging. However, he noted that some of the government departments required in the new commission are not necessary to its goal, and he said what is more important is that the Commission meet and carry out its mandates to establish programs that meet the needs of aging residents.

Governor Bryan also expressed reservations about Bill No. 33-0369, which authorizes the appropriation of $20,000 from the St. Thomas Capital Improvement Fund for the removal of the bust of King Christian IX from Emancipation Garden and replacing it with “The Conch Shell Blower” statue.

“I must reiterate the cautions testified to by the Virgin islands Council on the Arts that the statue ‘The Conch Shell Blower’ is not appropriate in shape and style to replace the bust of King Christian IX at the location in Emancipation Garden,” Governor Bryan wrote in his transmittal letter. “Additionally, the appropriation of $20,000 for the relocation of the two statues will most likely fall short of the cost of the project.”

Governor Bryan also approved Bill No. 33-0438, which comprises four separate legislative items:

- Appropriating $75,000 from the Centennial Special Fund to the Department of Education for Charlotte Amalie High School’s centennial activities.
- Creating regulations regarding the transfer of vehicles to beneficiaries in cases of death and giving beneficiary transfer designations on vehicle title certificates precedence over wills and other testamentary instruments.
- Removing personal care products from the prohibition on selling, importing or distributing sunscreen and other products containing oxybenzone, octocylene or octinoxate.
- Providing for the continuation of service for board members of the Virgin Islands Public Broadcasting System until a successor is found, divesting board members’ per diem payments and exempting the property of the Public Broadcasting System from judicial processes, taxes and special assessments.

Vetoes

Governor Bryan vetoed six measures, including Bill No. 33-0004, which would require that 1 percent of total capital improvement project costs be expended for works of art placed in public building.

“To require funding of 1% of all capital improvement projects to be expended for works of art is not an effective way to plan construction of our government buildings, especially while the Territory has not recovered fully from the two hurricanes of 2017,” Governor Bryan wrote in his transmittal letter. “Most of the government construction projects in the near future will be funded by federal funding, and such funds cannot be applied for the purpose set out in the Bill. Hence, a separate funding source would be required; none is provided.”

The Governor also said the measure’s requirement that departments spend funds for procuring art at the start of construction would require finding and paying for storage places.

Governor Bryan also vetoed Bill No. 33-0041, which would establish requirements for the construction and repair of roads and highways in the Territory, because of the lack of a funding source.

“Although I support construction, as well as repair, of the roads and highways of the Territory and mandates that call for ADA compliance as well as sidewalks for all ages, I want the Virgin Islands to be able to achieve this goal, which requires funding to implement,” the Governor wrote.

The Governor said he vetoed Bill No. 33-0055, which pertains to the Public Services Commission, because it is “overly punitive and overly expensive” and because “its overreach conflicts with federal law.” Governor Bryan said one his biggest concerns with the bill is that it sets up the Public Services Commission as an autonomous agency and, as such, would fund the agency through charges, penalties and fees to the utilities that will be passed on to the ratepayers.

“Our V.I. residents do not need to add the cost of maintaining the PSC to their utility bills, whether electricity, water, waste management, communication or internet bills,” Governor Bryan wrote. “On behalf of the people of the Virgin Islands, this is not acceptable, and the Legislature needs to fund the PSC fully and its consulting and investigative fees to not add a greater burden on the utility companies and the V.I. residents.”

Bill No. 33-0250, which would add to the duties of the Department of Public Works when administering and coordinating capital improvement projects was vetoed because it would slow the recovery process by causing delay to those types of projects, according to Governor Bryan.

“Our goal should be to improve and expedite the process of completing capital improvement projects by increasing the threshold readiness and allowing for a clearer definition of projects that fall under capital improvement, as well as the flexibility to utilize alternative procurement methods, such as ‘design – build,’ which allow for time and cost-saving measures,” Governor Bryan wrote. “Further, the Bill does not define what ‘front-end engineering’ is and also does not define ‘capital improvement projects.’ I cannot support a Bill that slows this Territory’s recovery at this time or under the proposed threshold.”

Governor Bryan also vetoed Bill No. 33-0282, which seeks to add the Athletic Director of UVI and the Little League Administrator to Virgin Island Sport Commission.

“The Commission has sufficient members and raising the number of members to 14 is simply cumbersome and inefficient,” Governor Bryan wrote.

The Governor also vetoed Bill No. 33-0364, which seeks to recognize the Territory’s indigenous tribes through the creation of the Virgin Islands Indigenous Tribe Identification Card, for several reasons, including lacking sufficient definition of requirements for providing proof of qualification; strict requirements for indigenous peoples’ organizations to identify their members; and limitations to the use of the identification card and any perceived rights beyond identification.

“This issue, unfortunately, has been abused by certain persons claiming to Sovereign Nation Persons who are not subject to laws of the United States of America or the Territory,” Governor Bryan wrote. “This matter needs more critical discussion and re-drafting.”

Other Bills

Other bills Governor Bryan signed into law are:

- Bill No. 33-0198, which increases penalties for illegally importing snakes and other nonindigenous species that may spread disease into the Territory. The Governor also cited a number of corrections needed to solidify the measure’s effectiveness.
